WEEKLY DELIVERY CYCLE

1. I push source code and its documentation to your repository each week.
2. You review the delivery and release that week's payment.
3. On receipt I continue into the next cycle.

WAY OF WORKING

Fully written and documentation-driven. Architectural decisions are captured in ADRs; setup and operations in runbooks. Documentation changes ship in the same pull request as the code.

COMMUNICATION

Text-only, always online and highly responsive. I participate in meetings in written form.

INSTEAD OF AN INTERVIEW

I am glad to complete a small, well-defined task (under one day) and deliver the source, so you can evaluate my work directly before we commit.

CODEBASE & EXPECTATIONS

All code follows the same architecture, conventions, and documentation style as my public repository. Please review it and confirm you are comfortable with the approach before we begin.

WHO THIS IS A FIT FOR

Teams that judge a contractor by the quality of the deliverable — architecture, code, tests, and documentation.

If your process requires identity documents, a home address, or a video / voice presence, we are not a fit, and I prefer to say so upfront rather than waste your time.

CONTINUITY & HANDOVER

Every delivery is self-contained: ADRs, runbooks, and setup documentation ship in the same PR as the code. A replacement engineer can onboard from documentation alone — no key-person risk.

IDENTITY & PRIVACY

I work under my professional name, Sam Shak. The engagement is evaluated on source code and documentation; I do not provide identity documents. My place of residence is private and is not part of the engagement.
